Dear LuRae Caldwell

Thank you very much indeed both for your most helpful conversation on the telephone the other day, and for your prompt letter updating me on the situation. Naturally, I am sorry to learn that the current arrangements for recasting your Diplodocus have fallen through. Please keep me in touch however, with arrangements that you may make for casting this in the future. At present, I am exploring the possibility of re-using the Carnegie Museum, Pittsburgh moulds, although there is considerable doubt about whether they are up to the job, after so much previous use.

It is several decades since I was at your museum, which I remember with much pleasure. I was there not long after the opening of the Dinosaur National Monument nearby, and was greatly thrilled by all those new movements in our profession, at that time. Much has happened since then, of course, and I enclose a pamphlet of a recent exhibition that I put together, a very small one, which may interest you. I would be interested to receive a list of your current range of publications, and also that of the Dinosaur National Monument, if you can kindly enclose one for me, so that I may order these to keep the good museological library here up to date.

With renewed thanks for your assistance

Yours sincerely
